

Sharon Tran
Art 75

Reading 3: Don't Fear The Internet

When designing and developing a website, there are different specific components of code that goes into rendering the website. The code that turns into a website uses HTML and CSS. HTML stands for Hypertext markup language, while CSS stands for Cascading style sheets. HTML code represents the text, links, and implementing images/videos. CSS is responsible for the colors, styling, and design for the website.