Reading Response #4

I learned that the significance of Net.art is not only in my imagination, it is just an oil painting we woven from code. It became a medium for website building, email, graphics and games. It is an expression of people's thirst for the Internet and the future. How people develop programming and how many people have great ambitions for Net.art's approach. The article said that "Eastern Europe" is the craziest about who is more fascinated by the Internet. This article will then continue to discuss working samples of people or others throughout the article. With the development of the times, the media will eventually be replaced, and Net.art will be the next lucky one.
