Reading Response – Don't Fear the Internet

While diving through the page, I came across with the series of 10 videos explaining the basic principles of web design. I was pleased to see this couple putting on an effort to make their content playful and easily digestible. Every section was dissected with examples and clear words that (almost) anybody could understand, and the fact that they show examples of what they are talking with graphics enhances the learning experience. Additionally, their voice is clear and words are well articulated which is something that often times is overlooked.

For what I can take from this series is the knowledge and tips these videos provide. That being said, constant review is necessary because, even though the content is easy and clear to understand, there is a good amount of information and details covered. Moreover, the only thing left to do after watching these videos is to put the knowledge into practice to become aquatinted with web designing.
